Welcome

Jenny Bax

Chief Executive Officer

Underwriting Agencies Council

Class of ‘26 gave us a wonderful foundation to build on. We learnt a lot from our participants, presenters and from bringing the Academy to life for the first time. We’ve taken those learnings into Class of ‘27 - keeping what worked, listening to feedback, and continuing to evolve the program.

The purpose of the Academy hasn’t changed. We want to invest in talented people who will help shape the future of the underwriting agency sector, giving them the opportunity to learn, grow and challenge themselves.

Participants will gain exposure to different parts of our industry, learn from outstanding industry leaders and subject matter experts, and build relationships with peers who will share the journey with them.
But the Academy has never been just about what happens in the classroom. It’s about building confidence, staying curious, asking questions and challenging your thinking. It’s also about becoming clearer about the kind of leader you want to be.

One of the things we loved seeing in Class of ‘26 was the strength of the connections across the cohort. That sense of community became an important part of the Academy, and one we want to continue building with Class of ‘27 and beyond.

To everyone considering applying, or thinking about nominating someone from your organisation - I encourage you to take the opportunity.

Back yourself, or back someone in your team.

We can’t wait to see what Class of ‘27 brings.

Michael Edmonds

Chair

Underwriting Agencies Council

The underwriting agency sector plays a vital role in protecting a significant portion of policyholders across Australia. It is a sector known for innovation, deep expertise and specialist knowledge. Time and again, underwriting agencies step up to provide solutions when brokers and their clients need them most.

It's no surprise, then, that the Underwriting Agencies Council (UAC) is held in high regard, not only within the insurance industry but also by a growing number of external stakeholders.

With leadership comes responsibility. As the voice of our sector, UAC is committed to investing in the capability, expertise and professionalism that define underwriting agencies.

The UAC Leadership Academy is an important part of that commitment. Following the success of our inaugural Class of '26, we are proud to see the Academy continue to grow and evolve with Class of '27.

The Board's commitment to developing our future leaders remains unwavering. We extend our sincere thanks to everyone who continues to contribute to the Academy - our sponsors, presenters, supporters and the many people who generously share their time and expertise. We look forward to welcoming Class of '27 and seeing the next generation of leaders make the most of this opportunity.
